

richcribs

NEWSDAY PHOTO / KATHY KMONICEK

Rupert Murdoch's house on Centre Island, Rosehearty, has been taken off the market.

BLOOMBERG NEWS PHOTO, 2007

Seems Rupert is keeping his Centre Island home

The 5-acre estate went on the market in June 2007 for $14.8 million.

The couple purchased the home in 2003 for $7.8 million.

CAPTAIN'S ROW

An Arts and Crafts style home on Sag Harbor's historic Main Street is listed with Gioia DiPaolo of Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate for $3.995 million. The five-bedroom, four-bath home, built circa 1920, sits on .63 acre on a stretch that locals call Captain's Row. It features an unusual "candlestick" fence.

The 3,000-square-foot house has a fireplace, two-car garage, heated gunite pool and cabana. It was renovated in 2004 by Bob Tortora, and featured later in a spread in Hamptons Cottages & Gardens magazine.

Tortora also worked on late actor Roy Scheider's Sag Harbor house, which Scheider moved into after selling his Sagaponack property to Billy Joel.

— LAURA MANN

Looks like media mogul Rupert Murdoch is staying put on Centre Island, at least for now. The listing for Rosehearty, his 10,000-square-foot Colonial mansion, has been pulled off the Daniel Gale Sotheby's International Realty Web site, as well as the Multiple Listing Service of Long Island site.

So is the house still for sale? "It's in a gray area," says listing agent Barbara Candee of Daniel Gale. Candee says Murdoch and wife, Wendi, are currently deciding what they want to do with the property.

The 11-bedroom, 7½-bath manse was last offered at $12.8 million.

A home for sale on Captain's Row in Sag Harbor